Pending the time when the affairs of the great French Colony shall be managed by a local Chamber and Senate, the Courrier cries out for the complete and permanent organization throughout the country of a competent judiciary, according to projects already proposed and submitted, and it points out that Cochlin-China can well afford a complete system of Courts and Magistrates, from the highest to the lowest, as the stamp tax alone brings in a revenue of $100,000 and the fees of Court mount up in the year to another fifty thousand dollars. With such a revenue there surely ought to be no difficulty about providing an adequate judicial staff.
